The JOURNAL OF COMMUNITY HEALTH will devote itself to original articles on the practice, teaching, and research in community health. This field is concerned with health care delivery as well as the prevention of illness and an analysis of the factors which affect an individual's or group's state of health. We seek well-executed studies and descriptions of projects which have had a documented impact on the health of defined communities or on the education of health care personnel. In addition, we welcome review articles and position papers which help clarify issues about health care practice and policy. The Journal also serves as a forum for the exchange of ideas and the identification of unsolved problems; to this end we actively encourage comment on Journal articles and community health issues. Periodically, books from a variety of disciplines of particular interest to community health teachers, practitioners, and investigators will be reviewed.
